It's not widely known that Limestone County is becoming popular for its unique and quirky restaurants and retailers. A prime example is award-winning goat cheese maker, Belle Chevre, located in Elkmont.
The Athens-Limestone area is a wonder for shopping and dining, and in recent years, it has been a regular destination for astute foodies and discerning shoppers. The reason for the influx is a rapidly developing community as well as the mounting successes of local restaurants and businesses that proudly showcase flair and atypical cuisine.

“We’re the fifth-fastest growing county in Alabama and we’re the 65th-fastest growing in the entire U.S.,” says Teresa Todd, president of the Athens-Limestone County Tourism Association.

With such expansion comes new opportunities, new people and new establishments. Take LuVic’s restaurant in downtown Athens for instance.

“People often think it’s an Italian restaurant, given its name, but the restaurant is named after owner Jerry Sandlin’s mother,” says Todd.
LaVici’s recently hired Randy Missildine, a chef from Thibodaux, Louisiana. The culinary master is introducing Cajun and Creole inspired dishes to a menu brimming with Southern comfort food.

A newer Athens restaurant has been turning heads and catering to curious palates since it opened in 2012. Picasso’s Grill emphasizes fresh, local foods and pairs drinks with its dishes.

The chef at Picasso’s Grill makes it a priority to visit with guests while they’re at the eatery—a touch that goes a long way with diners, according to Todd.

Belle Chevre is another palate-pleasing favorite with its goat cheese products. Tasia Malakasis, a Huntsville native, opened the fromagerie, a tasting room, a creamery and a restaurant in downtown Elkmont in April 2013.

Belle Chevre cheeses are sold nationwide and have earned prestigious recognition. The company was a runner-up for Garden & Gun magazine’s 2011 Made in the South award, the Taste Test Award Winner by Cooking Light magazine in 2010, and most recently, winner of the “Best Dessert” at the Dairy Innovation Awards in Switzerland for its new goat cheese cheesecake.

“Our future plans are really about product development,” says Malakasis. “We now have ice creams and we just launched a line of body care.”

While restaurants tantalize patrons’ taste buds, retailers are providing customers with great deals on a variety of exceptional goods.

Pat Preston and his father Doug started Preston’s Western Wear in 1985 as a farm supply store. As the demand for farming supplies decreased, the family shifted over to Western wear, and today its 10,000-square-foot shop stocks jeans, shirts, belts and boots—some of which are made from ostrich, snake and elephant skins.

For those looking to dress the whole family, look no further than Bennett’s Clothing.

Bennett’s has been in operation for almost 40 years, and continues to bring trendy styles to those living in the Athens-Limestone area. Shoppers can expect to browse through high-end brands such as Cole Haan, Southern Proper, The North Face and more.

Another thriving business in Athens is U.G. White Mercantile, a multigenerational family owned business. Because of its success, it’s planning to open a second location in Elkmont.

The mercantile, which started out as U.G. White Hardware and Implement Co. in 1917, provides items not typically found in hardware stores such as locally grown honey, old-fashioned candy, kitchen cutlery and more.

No matter how the community continues to change and develop, one thing’s for sure—retailers and restaurateurs know that they have a receptive audience for their products and fantastic fare. □ By Ryan Newhouse

In a time when many communities across the country are still recovering from economic challenges, the Athens-Limestone area has bounced back—and then some. Construction has not only brought new business to the region, but changes to many existing corporations. And all signs point to the trend continuing for many years to come.

In 2004, Electricfil (EFI) Automotive, a company that supplies the Chrysler FIAT car manufacturing group with electronic and electromagnetic systems, decided to open a plant in Elkmont. That introduced 80 jobs that needed to be filled by area workers. Eight years later, the company underwent an $11 million expansion and committed to opening up 120 more jobs through 2015.

A short two years later, EFI has announced another $2.6-million expansion project, which will establish the site as the company's North American corporate headquarters. The addition is expected to be complete by late 2017.

A second success story is Carpenter Technology
Corporation, a company specializing in premier alloy products for the aerospace, medical and energy industries. The company invested more than $500 million to construct a 500,000-square-foot plant in Tanner that will be operated by approximately 200 employees. The grand opening occurred in January 2014.

"Carpenter Technology celebrated its 125th anniversary earlier this year," says Tom Hill, president of the Limestone County Economic Development Association. "To have a company with such a lengthy heritage relocate here means a lot for our area."

Steelcase Inc., a Fortune 500 company that specializes in office workplace services and products, has called Athens home since 1979. It is one of the areas greatest examples of growth. Over the years, the company has swelled to 1,147 employees, making it one of the largest employers in Limestone County. The site has additionally grown to 940,000 square feet, making it one of the largest furniture manufacturing plants in the world.

“All three of these companies are wonderful corporate citizens,” says Hill. “They are very active in the community.”

Area residents enjoy employment opportunities in growing operations located outside of Limestone County as well. Nearby in Huntsville, Remington Outdoor Company plans to expand with a new manufacturing plant that will bring 2,000 jobs and impact the entire region over the next 10 years.

“Huntsville made it a regional project by reaching out to surrounding counties, including Limestone, to help offer incentives to Remington,” says Hill. “As the communities continue to grow, we will need to work together to bring industry to the area.”  ■ By Jennifer Tiley
In order to provide the best educational foundation possible for their students, both Athens City Schools (ACS) and Limestone County Schools (LCS) are in the midst of renovations and program expansions.

For LCS, this means educators are changing the way students learn in the classroom.

Starting in the fall, LCS Superintendent Dr. Tom Sisk says that the Limestone County Career Technical Center will offer five new courses including law enforcement and legal services, emergency services, diesel technology, industrial systems technology, and education.

Sisk says the concept is to equip students with skills to enter the workforce straight out of high school.

ACS will unveil a whole new look to some of the district’s buildings in the near future. The district is renovating several of its campuses, including a $10 million project to overhaul Athens Elementary School. The new two-story building will be constructed where the school’s current playground is located, officials say. Plans call for 24 general-use classrooms on each floor, a full competition gym and additional room for future additions, if necessary.

Proposed renovations to James Cowart Elementary School would include a new columned entrance to the building, an auditorium, a storm shelter and a playground.

"[ACS] is seeking to renovate and build state-of-the-art facilities to create an environment that fosters the best educational experience possible," says Terry Rolier, the district's executive director of personnel and public relations.

The area's private schools are also experiencing a growth spurt.

Lindsay Lane Christian Academy, a non-denominational school that started in 2009 and initially enrolled only 39 students, is expected to have about 420 students in the fall, says elementary principal Amy Frasier. To deal with the increase in student body, Lindsay Lane is making its classrooms more spacious. Additional renovations

When we say the schools in Athens, Alabama are good, we may be blowing our own horn.

But We're Not Whistling Dixie.

Just look at the facts. The average ACT score for students at Athens High School is 23.7. For the past five years 100% of AHS regular education students have passed the Alabama High School Graduation Exam. The Athens City School District spends more dollars per student than any school district within 65 miles of Redstone Arsenal and ranks among the top ten statewide. For the past four year period, an average 80% of the graduating seniors have gone to college. The school district boasts of excellent academic, competitive athletic teams, superior faculty and staff, and widespread community support. The district is comprised of four elementary schools, one intermediate school, a middle school and a high school. When it comes to education in North Alabama, Athens City Schools make the grade. A Step Ahead
Getting a Jump Start on a Promising Career

When Athens City Schools (ACS), Limestone County Schools (LCS) and surrounding higher education institutions come together for the advancement of area students, good things happen.

At ACS and LCS, students can take advantage of preparing for their college careers by seeking out help while still in high school.

“The Advanced Placement courses available at Athens High School create opportunities for students to receive top-notch college preparatory instruction on a level commiserate with that of their peers nationally,” says Terry Roller, ACS executive director of personnel and public relations. “Currently, AHS students average four points higher than the state average on their ACT scores.”

Students following a career technical education path have the opportunity to choose from almost 20 programs offered through a partnership between Limestone County Career Technical Center and Athens High School, according to Roller.

“Over the past three years, Athens City students have earned nearly 100 state-awarded certificates for career readiness,” he says.

At Calhoun Community College (CCC), young scholars can earn college credits while still in high school, thanks to the dual enrollment program.

“Dual enrollment/dual credit is a program which allows eligible high school students to attend college classes either at the college campus or at the high school and receive both high school and college credit,” says Ann Coleman, coordinator of cooperative education and technical curriculum at CCC.

Home and private school students are also allowed to participate, and in spring 2014, there were about 750 signed up for the program.

In addition, CCC takes part in the Alabama Federation for Advanced Manufacturing Education Advanced Manufacturing Technician (AMT) program.

Through AMT, students can earn an associate degree that combines first-rate curriculum needed to perform at highly sought after manufacturing facilities. Students in this program also gain paid working experience, technological skills and business principles from some of the best manufacturers in the industry.

While there is not a guarantee of a full-time job upon completion, graduates can take the skills learned through AMT and enter the workforce a step ahead of other job seekers.

In addition to assisting high school students with preparing for college, CCC presents several online courses in areas such as art, business, economics and health sciences. This option is perfect for individuals who need untraditional learning options.

At Athens State University (ASU) Center for Lifelong Learning, students have the ability to hone skills needed for their future.

“We collaborate with schools to offer instruction in ACT strategies to students needing test preparedness,” says Dr. Diane Sauer, ASU Center for Lifelong Learning director. “We offer art enrichment/career development classes for high school students in blacksmithing and cake decorating. This fall we will offer comprehensive job readiness and college preparedness, financial aid information and admissions essay [training].”

ASU also provides online degrees in myriad areas of study, including instructional design, computer information systems and accounting. The university also has distance-learning programs at Snead State Community College center in Boaz. ■ By Sarah Lancaster
Whether it's the first time around or child number three, expectant mothers can trust the physicians, nurses and staff at The Baby Place at Athens-Limestone Hospital with their health care needs and little bundle of joy.

At The Baby Place, patients can expect spacious, newly renovated rooms, complete with a small refrigerator and a flat screen TV. The hospital staff encourages parents and the baby to stay in the same room. Evidence has shown that being together promotes family bonding and improved rest for everyone.

However, when rooming-in is not an option, The Baby Place's nursery is available.

Athens-Limestone Hospital offers a variety of classes for expectant parents and their support system.

The childbirth course will prepare parents for what to expect when the big day comes while the parenting class—designed for all new parents and grandparents—teaches traditional information such as how to bathe the baby. It additionally includes instruction for infant cardiopulmonary resuscitation (CPR), sudden infant death syndrome (SIDS) prevention and car seat safety.

The breastfeeding class gives moms information to help ensure successful nursing practices. The hospital also offers services from a board-certified lactation consultant, who is available for assistance most afternoons.

All classes are held monthly in the education department of Athens-Limestone Hospital. This article was provided by Athens-Limestone Hospital.

Get Ready for a Fun Time

There is no need to worry about finding things to do when visiting or living in the Athens-Limestone area. From the boot scootin’ revelers at the Tennessee Valley Old Time Fiddlers Convention to the folklore spun during the Athens Storytelling Festival to the deep-fried gooey goodness at the Athens Grease Festival, there’s plenty to see, hear and especially eat.

Grab a cowboy hat, boots and flannel apparel for a one-of-a-kind rendezvous in May. The Limestone County Sheriff’s Rodeo is a weeklong event sure to wow adults and children alike. Kicking off the festivities, guests can enjoy the Annual Rodeo Parade, followed by horseback riding, children activities, street dancing, pageants and pony rides, all leading up to the main event. Saddle up and get ready to lasso in some fun!

Taking place in July, the Crape Myrtle Festival and Pageant in Ardmore offers up picturesque blossoms and family-friendly activities. Festivalgoers can enjoy live music, children’s games; browsing through antique cars, tractors, clothing and jewelry; and much more.

Playing on the community’s namesake of Athens, Greece, attendees are encouraged to sport their own togas and bring their appetites for the Athens Grease Festival every September. This event features some fancy fixings including fried Oreos, fried Nutter Butters, fried sweet potato spears, fried pies, shaved ice, burritos and anything else that can be sunk into golden bubbly oil.

“Fried foods are Southerners’ Achilles’ heel,” says Teresa Todd, president of Athens-Limestone County Tourism Association. “We especially love to batter and fry standard fare like okra and fish, but we don’t mind expanding the technique to Twinkies and Snicker bars.”

New to the lineup this September, Athens history meets present day for a weeklong traveling Smithsonian exhibit called, “The Way We Worked.” The display will showcase how the area workforce operated back in the day. The exhibition has been adapted from one created by the National Archives in Washington, D.C., which explored how working became a centralized element in American history over the last 150 years.

Through the Smithsonian Institution’s Museum on Main Street program, Athens was selected as one of only six communities to host the exhibit this year.

Sit back and hear a tale! The Athens Storytelling Festival has been rated a Top 20 event by the Southeast Tourism Society. This event is only fit for October, as the leaves are changing colors, pumpkins line the city streets and some of the nation’s best narrators take to the Courthouse Square. Attendees can stroll through downtown shops and dine at restaurants or with food vendors.

Also in October, get ready to dance a jig at the Tennessee Valley Old Time Fiddlers Convention sponsored by Athens State University (ASU). Aside from music, guests can enjoy authentic arts and crafts, food and the chance to win cash prizes.

“My favorite part of the convention is the carnival-like atmosphere. The people, the food, the music—it truly is the happiest weekend in Alabama,” says Guy McClure, director of public relations, marketing and publications at ASU.

No matter the main attraction, Athens-Limestone is home to fests for one and all. ■ By Sarah Lancaster

Farm to Fork
Farmers Market, Community Garden Taking Root

Those roaming the streets of downtown Athens on Saturday mornings are in for a fresh and healthy treat.

The Spirit of Athens, a downtown revitalization group, has been working for months to bring a farmers market to the Athens area. Now, all of that hard work and determination have resulted in the Athens Saturday Market. Farmers and artisans from Limestone County gather to offer up their seasonal crops, jams, jellies, pastries, breads, ice cream, teas and coffees, homemade soaps and fragrances, goat cheese and more. But it’s never the same goods twice—each week provides a new selection from which to choose.

For patrons, it’s more than just browsing through all of the fruits, vegetables and other products—it’s a full-on experience.

“The farmers market also has entertainment, different musical groups or bands,” says Teresa Todd, president of Athens-Limestone County Tourism Association.

Aside from the market, a community garden has been established on the same grounds, thanks to the help of another local organization. Keep Athens-Limestone Beautiful (KALB). The garden is open to those who have low-to-moderate incomes.

“The community garden seems like a natural outgrowth of our farmers market because we can use it, not only to feed the community who can’t afford to buy at the Saturday market, but we can use it also as an outdoor classroom to educate children on where and how their food is grown,” says Laura Glenn, Athens Saturday Market committee chair.

The community garden was made possible with a grant from Lowes Home Improvement.

“Lowe’s helped us to improve the market campus with the community garden,” explains Glenn. “With the help of a $20,000 grant, members of the market committee and KALB had the financial wherewithal to buy materials for beds, a shed for tools and a gazebo to be used as a seating area.”

In addition, several members of the market committee and KALB organizations worked together alongside a couple of Eagle Scout hopefuls to develop an assortment of raised gardens, according to Glenn.

Residents throughout the Athens community volunteer to help maintain the garden throughout the growing season. ■ By Sarah Lancaster

There's no better way to take in the best scenery in Limestone County than to follow along the many area trails and pathways.

"We'll walk you and run you to death on our trails," jokes Richard Martin, Limestone County Parks and Recreation department board member.

Considered by locals as one of the best-kept secrets in Alabama, the Richard Martin National Recreation Trail is a 10.2-mile path, named after Martin himself. The route wraps around the site of the Battle of Sulphur Creek Trestle, the bloodiest campaign fought on Alabama soil during the Civil War.

Several events take place throughout the year at the site, Martin says. At Sassafras Tea Day in March, walkers can sip on the beverage brewed from the leaves of the trees along the trail and stroll through the many spring wildflowers in bloom. Area equestrians never miss Horse and Buggy Day in May.

As Halloween draws near, children can accompany their parents on ghostly Haunt Walks in downtown.
Athens, where guides share scary stories of the town’s historic past.

For a step back in time, visitors can mosey along the Antebellum Trail, a 29-stop tour of pre-Civil War homes located throughout Mooresville, Athens and Belle Mina.

People looking for a different mode of transportation can hop into a kayak or canoe and ease down the Elk River, with five in-and-out locations in Limestone County. Fort Hampton Outfitters in Elkmont makes swaying along the stream easy with kayak, canoe and paddleboat rentals.

Martin says people can also traverse along the Athens-Limestone African-American Heritage Trail, which is a walking and driving path that highlights the area’s vast African-American history.

No matter what path is taken, Athens-Limestone offers many memorable trails decked in nature’s splendor and deep-rooted in heritage. By Jennifer Tirey
Imagine living in a place where every day is a walk in the park—literally. With six sites located throughout Athens, individuals calling the town home can enjoy a picnic and recreational activities any day of the week. Children and parents alike will enjoy the amenities at Big Spring Park, known locally as “The Duck Pond.” The park has three tennis courts, a playground area and a covered pavilion ideal for birthday parties and reunions.

The Wacky Quacky Ducky Derby, a rubber duck race, takes place at the site annually. The event serves as a fundraiser for Keep Athens-Limestone Beautiful, an organization dedicated to protecting the community’s environment.

Athens’ newest facility, Jimmy Gill Park, was dedicated in honor of the local councilman. It provides the perfect setting for summer cookouts at the pavilion or a game of hoops on the basketball courts.

At first, Lincoln-Bridgeforth Park may appear to be a typical green space with its pavilion, playground and tennis courts, but this facility is one of the few in town that has horseshoe pits. The site additionally hosts seasonal events including The Wild Game Cook-off and the Christmas tree lighting ceremony.

Those seeking a great place where their kids can have fun turn to Robert Allen Tinnon Park and Wellness Park. Both have playground areas, trails and pavilions.

The Swan Creek Greenway Trail connects two local favorites Swan Creek Park and the Athens Sportsplex. The park, located next to Athens High School hosts the annual Care Assurance System for the Aging and Homebound (CASA) mud volleyball tournament and the Cub Scouts archery event. The park also has a horseshoe pit.

Athens Sportsplex is the largest athletic facility in the area with five soccer fields, four baseball and softball fields, a junior Olympic-sized pool and a kids dugout, a fort-like playground with slides, swings and more. ■ By Jennifer Tirey

Fill’er Up
CNG Station First in Fuel

In a nod to the environment, Athens has installed the first fast-filling compressed natural gas (CNG) station between Birmingham and Nashville along U.S. 31 and Interstate 65, adjacent to the Athens Sportsplex.

The site services both the public and a new fleet of municipal utility vehicles.

CNG costs less per gallon than gasoline, and reduces operating and repair costs, as the clean-burning fuel minimally impacts a vehicle’s engine.

Another bonus is that it’s quick and easy to refuel at the new station.

“Fueling up a vehicle with fast-filling compressed natural gas will take about as long as it takes with gasoline,” says Athens Gas Department Manager Steve Carter:

“The new CNG station in Athens addresses three critical issues,” Athens Mayor Ronnie Marks says.

“It addresses dependency on foreign fuel, a cleaner environment and a savings with fuel costs.”

The project recently won the Alabama League of Municipalities Quality of Life Award in the larger cities category. That’s due in large part for the city’s efforts to reduce its carbon footprint. But as an added result, the city has realized a savings of more than $76,000 in fuel costs since transitioning numerous automobiles over to the eco-friendly alternative. In fact, the success has been so great that discussions have been opened with the local school system to try to transition their buses over to CNG as well.

“I am proud of [Carter] for pursuing this CNG station and insisting it be [open to the public]. And I am proud of the Athens City Council for seeing the wisdom of this project,” says Marks. ■ By Mike Dunphy/Sarah Lancaster contributed to this article.
Located just outside of Huntsville, Limestone County is a short drive away from Alabama's fourth largest city. Even with this proximity, the county's municipalities reflect a serene Southern charm.

The city of Athens, the seat of Limestone County, boasts a remarkable number of well-preserved antebellum abodes, which immortalize its Southern heritage. Mosey through its downtown and find a bustling dining and shopping scene. Restaurants dish up everything from finger-licking barbecue to classic fried chicken.

Nestled in the northern part of the county, Ardmore is home to the Alabama Welcome Center and a 225-foot-tall Saturn 1B rocket. NASA used this type of craft to propel Apollo capsules into space during the 1960s and '70s.

In 1818, Mooresville was established by the Alabama Territorial Legislature and the town is listed on the National Register of Historic Places. Its post office was built prior to the Civil War and amazingly is still in operation today.

"Mooresville is more than a tiny historic town; we are a family of neighbors who all know each other, our children, grandchildren and even pets," says Mayor Margaret-Anne Crumlish. "We feel very blessed to call Mooresville home."

The town of Tanner is named after the first mayor of Athens—Samuel Tanner—and was developed along the Louisville and Nashville Railroad lines.

Even though the small town of Elkmont has about 500 residents, it has a big reputation thanks to a few of the best musicians to ever croon a song. Richard Martin, Limestone County Parks and Recreation board member, says that's thanks to the town's most famous site, The Red Caboose. The venue plays host to bluegrass and country music singers who come down from Nashville.

The town of Lester has a population of 100 and features fine farmland as far as the eye can see. This is the place to settle down when looking for a peaceful kind of living.

The gripping history and small-town atmosphere of each locality in Limestone County makes the area a great place to call home. By Rachel Nall/Sarah Lancaster contributed to this article.

School Reunion Spotlights Storied Past

The Athens-Limestone area is rich in history, especially when it comes to the Civil War. Shortly after the sound of roaring cannons and gunfire ceased, a new era began for freed slaves, which included attending classes at Trinity School in Athens.

Mary Fletcher Wells established the school in 1865 and served as the first principal. Wells made it her mission to keep the school going, despite people shooting at her and setting the building on fire in protest of educating African-Americans.

After one such blaze caused significant damage in 1907, a new building was constructed at Fort Henderson, where battles took place between the North and the South decades earlier.

The school finally closed its doors in 1970. Trinity lives on in the memories of those who attended classes, many of which came to Athens on August 29-30 for its biannual Grand Trinity Reunion. According to Class of 1966 alumna, Shelbye Hobbs, the event will have a parade, a picnic, a keynote speaker and several other forms of entertainment.

Currently, the Athens-Limestone Community Association's (ALCA) Fort Henderson/Trinity School Project is transforming the former school site into a museum about Limestone County history and a community center. Some portions of Fort Henderson and the Union encampment where the facility was located are also expected to be rebuilt. The state of Alabama and the city of Athens and Limestone County donated $25,000 each to assist in the restoration.

Charlotte Fulton has written a book chronicling the history of the school for the ALCA. Called "Holding the Fort," it will be available by reunion time, and proceeds will be used to fund the restoration project. By Mike Dunphy/Sarah Lancaster contributed to this article.
